

Where does your company fall?

One of the largest employers in the US, the manufacturing sector is also one of the noisiest, therefore it is responsible for the highest number of occupational hearing loss cases. A study in Michigan showed that more than half of all cases of permanent hearing loss came from manufacturing.

Construction workers spend on average 70% of their time in hazardous noise environments yet they protect their ears less than 30% of the time.

